EXPLANATION OF TERMS

Basic Charges: The two required charges for electric service include energy supply and distribution.

Energy Supply Charge: The combined charges for electric generation and transmission services. Generation service is competitively priced and not regulated by the Public Utility Commission. Your co-op or other electric generation supplier you have chosen sets generation prices and charges. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission regulates transmission prices and services. These charges depend on the terms of service between the customer and the supplier. This area may also include a seasonal surcharge, a pass-through of seasonally higher power supply costs. This may also include a Wholesale Power Cost Adjustment (WPCA).

Distribution Charge: Charges on every member's bill for delivering electricity over your co-op's electric distribution system to your home or business. This charge will vary according to how much electricity you use. A monthly access charge, representing the carrying costs of distribution plant in place to serve you with electricity, is included whether or not you use any electricity.

Non-Basic Services: Any category of service not related to basic services (energy supply and distribution). This may include donations to Project Helping Hand or ERC loan payments.

Balance Forward: The amount carried forward from your previous electric bill.

Price to Compare: This amount is the same as the energy supply charge(s) on the front of this bill. It is expressed in dollars; for example $.0570 equals 5.7 cents per kilowatt-hour (kwh). Regardless of whether you purchase energy supply from the co-op or an alternative energy generation supplier, this is the amount to use to compare prices when you are shopping. Rates vary by season. Summer rates (June-Sept.) are typically higher.

Co-op Owners: Contributions to the Action Committee for Rural Electrification through the Co-op Owners for Political Action program are strictly voluntary. Contributions for federal and state political action committees are not deductible for tax purposes. You have the right to refuse to contribute without reprisal. Contributions may be stopped at any time.
